POULTRY SHOW ALMOST HERE

The 13th annual exhibition of the Western Maine Poultry Association will be held at Norway Opera House on January 9, 10, 11 with good prospects for a representative display of fine stock. The judges will be F. C. Cook, Waltham, Mass.; W. H. Whittle, Portland and O. M. Wilbur, lecturer and utility judge from Orono.

Larger cash and special prizes are offered this year than ever before. A large increase in cash premiums is noticeable for Utility where all ages compete together and each variety judged for their particular qualities. In this class nearly every variety but Bantams are eligible. Dressed poultry and eggs have strong cash prizes to induce a large display. Birds must be bled in the mouth but not headed. Double yolk eggs are barred.

Special prizes include silver cups, poultry remedies and foods, settings of eggs, subscription to papers and other while rewards.

One hundred dollars in gold is offered to exhibitors who win with a pen of ten birds of one variety, this is in addition to the regular premiums with no extra entrance fee. Pen must comprise 1 cock, 1 cockerel, 4 hens and 4 pullets shown in open class. It is understood boys in the Agricultural Clubs of Oxford County have been invited to compete in this class.

Rabbits have a chance to earn cash premiums in singles and litters with many valuable prizes of merchandise as well as inducements.

Members of the Association will meet all express trains to take personal charge of the exhibits and have all crates transferred to the Opera House immediately. Feeding and care will be in charge of experienced assistants. Norway Opera House is heated by steam and has a comfortable quarters.

C. Guy Buck of South Paris is secretary and is distributing the new premium list which contains many things interesting for the poultry raiser. Owing to numerous delays the premium lists did not reach many prospective exhibitors until the date for entries closed. Under the circumstances the time has been extended and entries will be accepted if sent immediately.

Novelty Turning Co. Will Resume Business
H. Walter Brown with his customary energy has leased the Woodlark factory on Marston Street and will be manufacturing wooden ware within a short time. Machinery is on the way and the building is being put into shape to accommodate the new business rising from the ruins of the fire.

This is only a temporary arrangement until the owner, known to the trade as "Buyoff Brown" can decide definitely on a permanent location. Several hatching offers have been received to settle the business elsewhere, but the town cannot afford to lose this prosperous business with its energetic owner and desirable employees.

Ella Jewett Coles estate east of Fair street, he may decide to rebuild there. This of course is mere speculation and a chance shot but all feel confident the Novelty Turning Co. will remain in Norway.

THE NORWAY ADVERTISER

The disputed election of sheriff for this county was heard at the Court House last Friday. Council for the contestants were present and instructed the court as to what finding he should make.

Chief Justice Cornish listened attentively to the arguments and took the papers and health Leavitt said he would make a decision later on. Thus the sheriff contest is undecided and Frank F. Woodside of Fryeburg is holding the office. He has moved to South Paris and has appointed his deputies excepting one in Norway where the office is a division of opinion as to who should receive it. Silver-Pennock
A very pretty and quiet wedding occurred Sunday, December 24th, when Charles H. Silver and Sadie Belle Pennock were united in marriage by Capt. Wilfred G. Conary using the double ring service.

The wedding occurred at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Pennock, Summer Street, Norway. The rooms were attractively decorated for Christmas season.

The bridal couple stood under a large bell in the center of the room. Only the bride's parents and grandmother were present.

The bride wore a navy blue suit with a white collar. She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Pennock or Norway, formerly of Waterford, and family moved to Norway some three years ago. She was a member of the Senior Class of 1923 of Norway High School. A member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Norway and a member of the Epworth League and Quaker Esther Class. For past few months she has been a Sunday School Teacher in the Junior Department.

The groom wore a navy blue suit. He is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Silver of Woodstock, formerly of Norway. He attended the school in Woodstock and West Paris, was a member of the Class of 1919 when he enlisted in the World War where he served several months overseas. We was gassed and wounded while over there. After returning home from France he has been at home with his parents the greater part of the time. During the summer of 1921 he was at Camp Perry, Ohio as expert fiddler and a sharp shooter.

After the wedding the bride cut the wedding cake, ice cream and refreshments were served by the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Silver have been the recipients of many fine gifts and have the best wishes for a long and happy wedded life from a host of friends.

Foss-Tracey
The marriage of Philip Emory Foss and Thelma Alice Tracey took place at St. Michaels Episcopal church in Auburn on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Arthur Stray. The double ring service was used. The couple were attended by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville M. Tracey and Carl T. Foss, a brother of the groom and his wife. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents at 160 Park Avenue.

Mrs. Foss was born in Auburn and is a graduate of Edward Little High School, the Maine School of Commerce and the Phillips Commerce and Philanthropic of the Episcopal church.

Mr. Foss was born in Norway, the son of Walter Foss of that town. He is a graduate of Norway High School and of Bowdoin College and is a member of Chi Psi Fraternity. He was in the medical corps during the war and is now an instructor in Biology at the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst.

Mr. and Mrs. Foss will be at home after Jan. 1, at 42 Lincoln avenue, Amherst, Mass.

Mills-Tarr
The marriage of Frank Edgar Mills and Doris Lydia Tarr of Auburn took place at the home of the officiating clergyman, Rev. I. A. Bean, Nichols street, Auburn, pastor of Hammond St. Methodist Episcopal church, Monday noon. The couple were unattended and the single service was used.

The bride is the oldest daughter of the late Elden H. Tarr. She was born in Auburn and educated in its schools. She has been a successful teacher in Norway schools for some years.

Mr. Mills is a millwright and one of Norway's promising young men.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Smith leave Monday, Jan. 15, for Florida, where they will spend the winter as in the past few years.

Edward Dunn went to Boston, Monday, where he will attend Bryant & Stratton Business College. He stops at the Y. M. C. A.

According to William Ripley's plans the old ice house on the shore of Lake Pennesswasse is to be removed and a large modern structure erected with a greater capacity. Work will start about September next.

New Years Day was generally observed in town with the business places closed but factories running as usual. Pelted and few there were to outdoor sports slush without just cause. The bus pulled off the route after the first trip in the morning. This was done to save the roads from deep ruts. Ed Rich with a pair of horses and a four seater traverse sled made semi occasional trips to South Paris with passengers. Altogether Norway was off the map for the day.

December Blizzard

The worst blizzard in years swept northern New England Thursday and Friday. It was a regular north east gale, with snow, sleet and rain according to locality. Seaport towns in Maine were especially hard hit, with traffic paralyzed and telephone service out of commission. More than thirty feet of snow, in many cases, fell breaking the record.

Locally the blizzard was the worst one thus far this season. Snowfall is reported from 12 to 18 inches. The fun started Wednesday evening after two days preparation. A strong northeasterly wind started snow flakes a plenty. This kept steadily at it until a shift of wind Friday evening checked the snow avalanche and sent fair weather.

Travel was almost impossible. Mails delayed and the Boston papers nearly a day behind their delivery in town. Fred Young fought the elements to keep a reasonable bus service between the two villages. With the assistance of Ray Bicknell and Francis Ames they kept the auto bus plowing a trail all Thursday night and Friday morning. The boys had a varied experience during the lonely hours. Shoveling, hiking somewhere for gas and other activities kept the crew awake.

About every person who could swing a shovel went on to the job of clearing up Saturday morning. Snow plows and road rollers soon negotiated the drifts, with the greatest struggle in outlying sections.

Just returning to normal traveling when the big rain storm reached us on Monday. Sloppy walking kept many under cover and few automobiles dared a trip in the soft stuff. Surely the proverbial January thaw landed squarely when the opening gong sounded.

High School Basket Ball
Norway High School will open the home season at Norway Opera House, Academy, evening, Jan. 5 with Bridgton. The game called 8 o'clock. Norway has a quiet of light weights, but speed is there with no small amount of skill on tap. Coach Luce has held the reins only a short time, but is developing latent powers and slumbering talents. Coaches generally predict he will produce one of the snappiest outfits in this section.

Dance after the game, music by True's orchestra. Tickets checked at Stone's.

BOY SCOUT NOTES
Bethel Scouts
Troop No. 1, Bethel, has placed its first display on exhibit in the show window of Thurston's Hardware Store. Scouts O'Day and Thurston had charge of this exhibit.

On January 1, Bethel troop showed its efforts in behalf of the Red Cross Drive when they made their final return on this date. Troop No. 1 has reduced its numbers somewhat in order that the troop would be made up of active members. New Scoutmaster Chester Howe of Assistant Scoutmaster Chester B. O'Day are interested in securing a large active membership.

Locke's Mills Scouts On Hike
Scoutmaster Stanley Bartlett of Troop No. 1, Locke's Mills is providing a fit successor to former Scoutmaster Pettinell. Under his active leadership the troop is whipping into line. Already five members of the Troop are engaged in Merit Badge work and coming fine.

Their last hike was of a days duration with a weeks fun in the meantime. "Shanks Mare" led the way by the Oxford County Scout Camp and over the "gore" to Harry Packard's. Here they gained a valuable addition to the number and returned to Bethel's camp on the other side of North Pond. A day of fun followed. Every one did his part of the Scoutcraft Work and Ice Fishing. This is the first hike under the new leader and certainly invites another.

Norway Scouts
Troop No. 1, Norway is not planning on being a "fallender" during the coming year of 1923. Scoutmaster Lawrence Denison is proving a leader that will receive 100% support from Norway. He is able to give. Already the American Legion is solid in its support of the troop. The troop has been entirely reorganized with Houghton Kimball as Scoutmaster. Regular scout meetings full of scoutcraft are in progress and putting the ginger into every one connected with the troop as well as bringing public opinion solidly behind the Norway Scouts.

Five new members have been added to the Norway troop bringing the total to 33 registered scouts. Plans for Troop No. 2 are being discussed freely and it is the consensus of opinion that a second troop is a very probable thing and will become a necessity in order that all applicants will have a chance to get in on the Scouting program.

Buckfield Scouts Hike to North Pond
Buckfield Scouts Hike to North Pond. Nobody loves a "fat man" but every red blooded boy will attend an ice fishing hike when ever possible. Troop No. 1, Buckfield, accompanied by Executive Perham went ice fishing on North Pond Wednesday. Ice chisel, fish traps, shiners, grub and scouts traveled together for the day.

The first pickered caught weighed around one and one-half pounds. The others will be left for imagination. Every one had a great time. Dinner was a great event. Practise work in fire building and outdoor cooking was taken up but no official tests were passed.

After dinner came sports and a Woods of Maine hunt were carried on. A large variety of Maine woods were collected for a future exhibit. Scouts Ellsworth, Smith, Sidney Hutchinson, Clinton Briggs, Arnold Jacobs and Executive Perham made up the party. The number were small due to a mix-up in notifications sent different scouts. Nevertheless, this hike proved a hit and all returned home satisfied.

West Sumner Scouts
Troop No. 1, West Sumner held its meeting Tuesday night at the Vestry. A good representation of Sumner and West Sumner scouts were on hand for a snappy program. Scoutmaster Sidney Brown and Assistant Ryerson were in charge.

First Aid instruction took up the opening hour. Following this came the official business meeting preceded by the recital of Scout Oath, laws and pledge of allegiance to the flag. Vernon Redding as chairman called the meeting to order and official business was discussed. Troop finance was talked over and definite plans for a hike were made. A short talk on the necessity of advancement in Scout Rank in order to keep troop spirit and active scouting was given by Executive Perham. A special program of meetings was planned in order that several members would be able to secure their Advanced Degree badges in the near future.

The Athletic program consisted of boxing. Everyone took a hand and made things lively. Two-minute rounds short as they seem, are all that is required to produce red blooded boys and red noses. Scout Norwood Ford completed his Second Class requirements. He is the first West Sumner scout to gain this rank. Scout Ford was a member of the Oxford County Scout Camp in 1922.

NEWRY
It was with regret we learned of the sudden death of one of our former esteemed townsmen, J. S. Brown now of South Paris. For a number of years he served in nearly all the offices of this town and in no instance did he fail to do his duty. He leaves a large circle of friends to mourn his death. His family has the sympathy of all who have ever known the one departed.

THE NEGLECTED GRAVES
In the old grave yards in Oxford County there are a few neglected graves and some entire yards are neglected. In these rest the mortal remains of the ancestors of our present most worthy native Oxford County people.

The Advertiser would publish a list of those burying grounds and as far as possible the graves buried there. It would also publish suggestions from any one of how these might be cared for, so far as cutting grass, bushes, righting head stones, repairing fences, etc.

Of course, the best method digged and sure way would be for the descendants to establish a small fund for a permanent care.

Let us hear from every one who has ever seen such neglected graves.

A TRIP TO FLORIDA

By Lydia Lord Shedd

Christmas Day was celebrated here very much as 4th of July is celebrated in the North. We were awakened by the firing of guns and crackers. All through the day it was kept up at intervals.

Quite a display of fireworks in the evening, shooting stars predominating, they were very beautiful. Vero's Community Christmas Tree in Liberty Park was a wonder, lit up by electric lights. Santa Claus distributed gifts to every child present.

The program arranged by the Music Department of the Woman's Club, commenced at 8 p. m. A large crowd was in evidence, hardly standing room on the basketball platform.

Dr. J. M. Cody gave an interesting talk on the baby Jesus. Four tableaux by members of the Woman's Club, "The Three Wise Men," "Angel Appearing to the Shepherds," "Joseph and Mary in Bethlehem," "The Madonna and Child Jesus," Singing of Christmas carols by the school children. The presents were donated by the Vero Merchants.

The McKee-Sexton Land Co. will plant 45 acres in the Osholammock to oranges and grapefruit this season. The company already has 55 acres in young groves in this tract making 100 acres. The company is composed of Arthur G. McKee of Cleveland, O. and W. E. Sexton of Vero.

The machinery has arrived for the new water works and more than half of the mains are now laid. A new canning factory is finished and work commenced Friday canning grape fruit and they are to can tomatoes also. The Polk Canning Plant, Beachland Development Co. are going to build some fine roads leading from the city to the beach. They have had a very prosperous summer.

The Vero Machine & Supply Shops are being enlarged on the Dixie Highway. The ditch digging machine is at work digging about 100 feet a day taking up about 2 1/2 yds to a dip. The Dixie Highway is to be rebuilt from Vero to Wabasso. C. E. Kahan is to be resident engineer.

At the meeting held at Mayor Kings last week the property holders at Oseola Park, voted to plant the "Coccol Plumosa" as a shade tree for the side walks in that section. The streets are to be paved. It will cost the property owners two hundred and fifty dollars per hundred feet. The lots are all to be cleaned up in the city limits. There are many beautiful shrubs and plants being set out. The "Hibiscus" is Florida's most popular flower. The "Bougainvillea" is a beautiful climbing vine and makes a splendid shrub by training also.

The pine needles here are from 12 to 15 inches in length and are made into many useful and ornamental articles by being woven together. The tall wiry grass growing on wild lots is made into baskets, bags and other fancy work.

Many wild rabbits make their home in this grass and are doing a lot of damage to the crops, being very bold. War is being waged on them continually by the farmers.

We were told by an aged man who had lived in Vero for seven years that during his day here, there had been but two or three days during that length of time but what the sun had shone sometime during the day. The weather has been fair here since we have been nearly all of the time, no thunder showers, only distant thunder twice. Flashes of lightning have been seen throughout the night from the storms at sea. There was quite a rainfall in the evening of the 27th and a high wind today, the 28th.

The St. Louis County Fair will be held in Vero from Jan. 23rd to Jan. 27th. The places of business throughout the city are giving out tickets on a new Sedan car to be given to the person holding the lucky number during the fair.

The fruit growers have started in picking their fruit with large crews. The packing will last until about April. The fruit is all washed by machinery in the packing rooms before being packed. The wrapping is done by hand. Then the boxes of fruit are put into machines where it is pressed down and the bands are nailed by hand around the box. Visitors are allowed to visit every room in the packing house but no one is allowed to speak to one of the working people.

The Overseers are very courteous to visitors and one can ask them all of the questions they wish to. Boxes of fruit that will not stand the test, that is of standing firm on end when wrapped in the tissue wrapping paper are sent to the canning factories that have been built for that purpose, a new industry. Loads of rotting fruit are hauled off and dumped.

Hearts of the grape fruit is being prepared for market in Vero. The Polk Grapefruit Canning plant is turning out 350 cases daily each containing two dozen cans. There are three factories running now with about 25 people employed in each.

PAYING RENT TO YOURSELF

Business men usually urge people to own their own homes, as one of the best means to acquire a start in life. Real estate dealers have a talking advertisement, "Pay rent to yourself." Is it true that a man can make a saving by owning his home and avoiding rent? Or will his costs for interest, taxes, repairs, insurance, etc., offset what he used to pay for rent?

Some people of course buy more costly houses than they can afford. But if a man buys within his means there is apparently a saving. If he rents, his landlord is entitled to some return for the care, effort and responsibility that he takes on himself to look after that house. If a landlord got clear, in addition to the interest that his money would earn in an equally safe investment, 1 or 2 per cent extra compensation for looking after the house, most people would say that this was only a fair return. Some would claim that he should get still more.

Unless the landlord does clear a return somewhat higher than he could get in the safest kind of bonds, he has no inducement to own houses and rent them out. There are some annoyances in owning homes for such purposes. It takes considerable time to look after them, sometimes tenants do not pay, sometimes houses stand vacant. Landlords are entitled to a profit sufficient to compensate for such effort and annoyances.

Now if the renter decides to own his house and can acquire the same at a reasonable price, he ought to save the margin that went to the landlord as his compensation for the time and risk required by the renting business. Hence there is every reason to believe that the purchase of a home for a fair price does help a man save money. If he can save 1 or 2 per cent or more on the value of the house annually, which he properly could be considered as the landlord's compensation for taking care of the house, the new owner is saving money.

GROUSE MAKES HEARTY MEAL

Two Thousand Rose Beetles in One Day Said to Be Not a Menu Beyond Her Capacity.

Two thousand rose beetles in one day were on the menu of a hen grouse which was experimented with at Clark university at Worcester, Mass., and which Prof. Hugh Findlay told about in a lecture on "Useful Birds in Our Gardens and Orchards," given recently at the New York Botanical gardens, Bronx park. Professor Findlay, who is horticulturist in the department of agriculture at Columbia university, has spent several years in central New York and the New England states studying the habits of birds during the nesting season.

He has photographed some 200 birds in their natural haunts, and from these photographs has developed slides which he has colored with Japanese transparent dyes. The birds range from the tiny humming bird to the great eagles photographed near Onondaga lake. In his lecture, Professor Findlay showed some of our most destructive insects and their particular bird foes, showing plainly which species help to keep our plants, and trees from being destroyed by insect foes.

The hen grouse, who was proved to have made away with 2,000 rose beetles in one day, he used as an illustration of the economic value of some birds in the destruction of insect pests.

WHERE ALL SPEED IS ALIKE

Light, Electricity, X-Rays, and Magnetic Storms Declared to Move with Equal Velocity.

That in the radium rays we have an indication of a new and mysterious world of energy, we find what seems an impressive testimony in the law of velocity governing these in common with other recently discovered phenomena. "One definite thing we do know," says Professor Soddy, writing of the ether, "namely, the velocity at which influences are transmitted. It is 185,000 miles per second, the speed of light. So far as we yet know, all influences that are transmitted by the ether travel at this one definite velocity. Not only light, but also the electro-magnetic radiations employed in wireless telegraphy, the magnetic storms, as they are termed, which reach us from the sun, and also as we believe, the X-rays, travel through the ether at this one definite speed." That speed is in all these cases the same is suggestive of a common source and fountain head, and one is emboldened in the supposition that behind and within the material system with which we are familiar is a subtle and infinitely marvelous world from which the universe we know is fed and sustained, and which uses the light—swift undulations of the ether—as the carrying agent of its varied influences.—Charles Kassel in the North American Review.

Tool Straightens Nails.

Even bent wire nails are being salvaged from the waste piles in Germany and restored to usefulness by means of an ingenious nail straightener that may be fastened to the workbench. The device is described in the Popular Science Monthly.

Hinged to one end of the cast iron base is a long lever with a handle. A few inches from the fulcrum of the lever an iron rod is hinged, and to this is attached a claw which grips the head of the nail to be straightened. The nail is placed with its head in the slot of the claw and with its body between the jaws of a straightening die which is operated by a lever. The jaws firmly grip the body of the nail, and when the long lever is drawn back the nail is pulled through the eye of the die and effectively straightened.

Indian Has Remarkable Memory.

The most retentive memory in America is said to belong to a native Indian of the Yakima tribe. His brain cells register everything he sees or hears.

During the war he served with the army in France, and was of much value in carrying long messages, observing positions, or checking supplies, according to an Indian bureau report. When he was in camp he could call off a regimental roster and catalogue every item of equipment without any note or memorandum. On one occasion, after making a full report of observations to the extent of a thousand items or more, he repeated the full text of a lecture he had heard the night before. This was in the presence of the lecturer himself and was pronounced perfect.

Boy Found Treasure Trove.

A kettle of gold has been found on a mountain by a French schoolboy who left Chambray intending to ascend Mount Blanc. He had no guide and no food, and did not even carry the traditional alpenstock. After half an hour's climbing he came across a kettle. Looking into it he found 163 gold pieces dated 1199 and bearing the arms of the house of Savoy. Immediately the young would-be mountaineer abandoned his projected climb, and took his find to the police.

New Arrangement.

He was a contractor and after building nine houses on the same plan, blue prints were of no consequence to him. The tenth house was well under way before he gave much attention to the details. He surveyed the structure and was astonished to find that a fireplace had been built in the kitchen. His other houses had all faced the west. This one faced the east.

The hardest thing to do now days is to bestire sympathy.

THE HUMAN FACTOR

Readers of the newspapers are familiar with stories of sea captains grown gray in the business of steering ships who suddenly shipped a mental cog and experienced switchmen who for no apparent reason have blundered and wrecked their trains; of veteran locomotive engineers who went unaccountably blind to danger signals. These lapses are recognized as constituting that "human factor" which must be taken into consideration in all attempts to prevent avoidable accidents. And they cannot be wholly guarded against because of the fact that they occur most often when the victim of the lapse has done the same thing so frequently that he does it automatically without conscious effort.

A case in point, though one involving no danger to life or limb, is that of the man who suddenly forgot how to tie his necktie. For years he had turned the trick without having a thought that he could possibly forget how to do it. The operation had become purely mechanical, a bit of morning routine requiring no more conscious thought or effort than the tying of one's shoe. Then suddenly one morning, when there was plenty of time to catch his car for his place of business, this man suddenly realized that he had forgotten how to tie his necktie. He tried and tried and then, with the sweat starting from every pore, he realized that his fingers had forgotten their cunning and he was obliged to call his wife to assist him. His better half did not help matters any when she confessed jocularly that she was expecting to have to wash and dress him someday, but he dropped the matter and the old routine the next morning and has never had any trouble since.

Another case in point is that of a man who was an incorrigible solitary drinker. He had played thousands and thousands of the so-called Canfield game, so many, in fact, that his playing was practically automatic. Then he went away on a vacation and during the time he was away he had forgotten how to play the game. One evening after returning home he got out the cards for a game of solitaire and was surprised, not to say frightened, when he discovered that he could not remember how to play it. He could not remember how the cards were laid down, but from that point he was at a loss of a loss how to proceed as though he had never known how to play the game.

All of which illustrates the danger of reliance upon doing things automatically, of getting into a rut with the idea that things will move along without conscious effort to direct them. There are probably many automobile drivers, who are almost unconsciously do the right thing at the right time, who would be stumped momentarily at least, if asked to explain just what they would do in certain emergencies. Through experience they manage their car unconsciously and automatically, and so are in danger of finding their mind a blank when suddenly called upon for a quick response.—Bridgton Journal.

WHAT ONE MAINE TOWN HAS DONE

Long List of Great Men Who Have Gone Out from Norway, Me. Attitude of the Town Toward Native Sons Rare Beauty of its Scenery

Written for The Boston Herald by Don C. Seitz of the New York World.

When the returns of the last census came in I noted curiously the fact that my old town of Norway, Me., had in the 10-year cycle gained but nine in population. Now the town which nestles between the foothills of the White Mountains and the granite range that guards the Androscoggin in Oxford County is a sturdy, independent community and has been since its foundation in 1786. Its people are neither rich nor poor. It has substantial industries and some 200 farms. Its round 3,000 people have, however, long ceased to grow in numbers. I wondered why.

Not long after this thought came to me I saw stated in the Norway Advertiser, a model of all that a small town paper should be, the fact that former residents of Norway in the vicinity of Boston had founded an association. The first enrollment contained 183 names. I looked the list over and saw that it numbered, among the young, at least, some of the smartest of the rising generation of my later memories or contacts in my vacation visits, and I felt to thinking what a pity it was that Norway could not find occupation for these, which would give it a population worthy of its beautiful surroundings and down the pressure on the cities. This was decidedly true. Of Boston had founded an association. The first enrollment contained 183 names. PLANT A BASS

Showing What Has Been Done in Maine
By B. F. Wilder and from the Isaak Walton Monthly

We anglers are inclined to imagine that in bygone days all waters swarmed with fish. We are apt to contrast the picture of the past with the sport of the present, to the disparagement of the latter. We are inclined to regard the fishing we now have as but a wasted remnant of what might have been a glorious inheritance, to look upon its future as hopeless, and so to adopt a "What's the use?" attitude toward efforts for its improvement. To show the error of that picture, to show that such an attitude is a mistake, to show that reward attends even the smallest of beginnings, I sketch the story of the black bass in Maine.

In 1868 there were no black bass in Maine. That item demands a paragraph to itself. Think of it! Not one black bass in the waters of the entire State; the State whose bass fishing now rivals any to be had in this country! Not much wasted inheritance in that, is there? And how that picture of the swarming waters fades!

Had Maine's anglers viewed conditions from a "What's the use?" standpoint, the State would have no bass now; but they knew that the gods help those who help themselves, and instead of lamenting that their ancestors had done but little for them they went to work. Little was known of bass breeding, the price of brood bass was almost prohibitive, and it is likely that prejudice, or at least indifference existed against the introduction of black bass in Maine Waters. But, as always happens, difficulties vanished before determination, and within ten years those old-time sportsmen had at least fair bass fishing at their very doors.

That prejudice existed is suggested by some of the Commissioners' reports, one of which states that although they (the Commissioners) have obtained some information, it is their opinion that the bass should not be introduced into Maine waters without the approval of some competent authority. Another report closes with the remark: "We do not regard the distribution of new varieties of fresh water fish as of much importance to a State possessed of such singular wealth in her trout and landlocked salmon as is Maine." But if prejudice existed, it was overcome, for in August, 1869, Cobossecontee Lake and Cochinewagon Pond were stocked with small-mouth black bass at the expense of The Oquossoc Angling Association, the fish being furnished by a Mr. Brown from his private pond at Newbury, N. Y. Here many were planted is unknown. Probably very few, for an estimate of about that date for a similar job quotes live bass, delivered in Maine, at five dollars apiece.

Later in 1869, thirty-four small-mouth bass were brought from Newbury, N. Y., to the waters of the State and released in Duck Pond, near Portland. Still later in the same year, a larger lot were delivered at Bangor by Mr. E. S. Woodford of West Winsted, Conn. These were planted in Fitts Pond, Newport Pond, and a few sent to Phillips. (It might be well to say here that the word "pond" as used in Maine does not mean exactly what it does elsewhere. Some of Maine's ponds are six or eight miles long and proportionately wide.)

And now Maine was in a position to supply her own needs. The Fish Commissioners' report for 1872, only three years after the first bass were planted says: "The black bass turned into Fitts Pond, Phillips Pond and Newport Pond three years ago by Mr. Atkins have multiplied largely, and we shall be able to draft from those nurseries to such waters as it is advisable to stock with them this coming year."

The report for 1874 says: "In the autumn of 1869, Duck Pond in Falmouth, Phillips Pond in Dedham, Newport Pond in Bangor, and Cochinewagon Pond in Monmouth and Cobossecontee Pond in West Winsted, were stocked with black bass. It was intended that these ponds should be a basis of supply to stock other waters when application should be made for that purpose, to the Commissioners. These fishes have grown and multiplied to the utmost of our expectations, but we have not been able to obtain the requisite supply when desired. Our best success has been at Duck Pond, near Portland; there we obtained thirty-eight which were transported to a pond in Norway, and others to Whitney Pond in Canton. There is an abundance of these fishes in all the ponds we have recited above, but we are not yet successful in being able to find parties living near these ponds to catch them for reasonable prices."

For this story of the black bass in Maine we must depend largely upon the necessarily brief reports of the Commissioners, but now and then we can still find a living witness. For the stocking of Lake Penesseewassee, the "pond in the woods," mentioned in the preceding paragraph, we have Mr. Clarence M. Smith, of Norway, one of those keen old-time sportsmen to whom we anglers of the present generation are so deeply indebted. Mr. Smith says:

"In August, 1876, Dan Harmon, Merrill Fuller, Jesse Howe and I met Commissioner Stanley by appointment at Duck Pond, near Portland, where we put in the day fishing. The result, two bass, one weighing about one-half pound and the other one-quarter. We then lined the lading net with mosquito netting and dipped twenty-seven about the size of a match. Those twenty-nine bass were put in our lake."

Mr. Smith admits that he is not sure of the date of that stocking, and as it is mentioned in the report for 1874, it is likely it took place then. But the exact date is of no great importance; what we are interested in is what resulted from the planting of twenty-nine small bass in a pond six miles long and more than a mile wide. Again I quote Mr. Smith:

"We began to fish in 1879. The largest bass caught that season, that I know of, weighed one and one-quarter pounds. Most of them ranged from one-half to three-quarters of a pound in weight. For more than twenty years the fishing continued to improve. From our lake Sand Pond and Little Penesseewassee and several lakes in Waterford were stocked."

Those who have fished Lake Penesseewassee will find it difficult to believe that the multitude of small-mouth black bass therein could have sprung from the twenty-nine planted by Mr. Smith and his friends, yet such is the fact. To give an idea of what sport the lake affords, I will say that in the eight seasons I have fished it I have taken on the fly, and returned unharmed to the water, literally thousands of bass; and I have seen one angler, fishing with a single cork bug, take one hundred and seven bass in one day. Though fishing is not as good as it once was, there is still wonderful sport to be had; the fish will always rise to a properly offered fly, and at no season of the year have I ever found it necessary to use live bait. I give these details to show what resulted from the planting of those twenty-nine tiny bass.

The Commissioners' reports now show that plenty of fry and fingerlings are to be had for the catching. They also show an increasing appreciation of the importance of this new variety of fresh water fish, for the singular wealth of trout and salmon is vanishing. One report says:

"Mr. Gilman of Meddybemps, who takes a deep interest in fish culture, desired us to stock Meddybemps lake with black bass, as the utter disregard of the laws at Dennysville prevent the ascent of the alewives and salmon, and the pickered have destroyed all the trout in the lake."

Now many citizens were interested in stocking and the bass were distributed widely. Being unable to get people living near the nurseries to catch brood bass, the Commissioners took that job themselves, and during 1873 they secured about one thousand bass from Phillips and Duck ponds alone. With these many lakes and ponds were stocked that year, notably among them being Snow Pond and Long Pond in the famous Belgrade chain. And because the natural increase of the bass planted was greater than the numbers taken for sport or food, the lakes soon swarmed with them.

My personal experience with the great bass lakes of Maine begins with 1903. Then the fishing was probably at its height, though some of the old guides claimed it had been even better. How that could be is difficult to imagine, for the bass ran large and they were present in almost unbelievable numbers. Fishing with two flies, one angler is said to have taken three thousand in a single month, and scores of one hundred to the rod in one day were common. All fish taken, except those wanted for food were returned unharmed, of course.

To get an idea of what one hundred bass a day really means, divide a day of ten hours into minutes—there are only six hundred of them. Then, to take a hundred bass in a day, one must average to raise, hook and bring to the net a bass every six minutes; and in that reckoning there is no time out for lunch, which in those days was a function. The bass were actually so plentiful that more depended upon the angler's physical strength than upon his skill.

For some years the lakes held their own, for to get about in the interior of the State at that time was not easy, and so, in comparison with the present day, the anglers were few. But with the development of the automobile, conditions changed. Travel, which had been slow and difficult, now became quick and easy and thousands of anglers poured in from other States—States which had done little or nothing to improve or even preserve their own fishing. New fishing camps were opened; summer cottages shot up; almost overnight; the price of property soared. It was an era of prosperity for Maine, but the demand made upon the lakes was terrific and slowly the fishing declined. However neither the State nor the citizens were content to let it drift from bad to worse; instead they sought a remedy.

They have found it in re-stocking—in generous restocking. The State has done its part; the citizens are willing that the State should be called on to shoulder the entire burden, have done theirs. Thousands of bass fry and fingerlings have been distributed by the hatcheries, thousands more have been purchased by private subscription, and all have been liberated in the depleted waters.

And the lakes are coming back. Everywhere it is the same story, the lakes are coming back and coming back fast. From a section I had believed damaged almost beyond remedy I have a letter which is typical. It says:

"The lake was restocked with bass and from the number of young bass around the shores I would say that they were growing remarkably well. Never before have I seen so many small bass around the shores as I saw this spring. Also, we have had this summer the best bass fishing that we have had for many years past."

That is the story, in outline of the black bass in Maine. It spoils our pictures of the swarming virgin waters; it knocks the spots out of the idea that our sporting inheritance has been altogether wasted. But it shows how easily bass may be planted and what reward may reasonably be expected from planting.

We do not labor under the difficulties of the old-time sportsmen. We need not pay five dollars apiece for our bass; we can buy them for nothing, delivered at our doors. We need not drive for hours behind a horse to stock an outlying lake; we can whisk there and back in an automobile. Come let's get busy! Let's have good bass fishing at our own doors. It is said that the acid test for any idea is, "Will it work?" To which some cynic has added, "And will it pay?" If the "Plant a Bass" idea is tested by either or both these reagents it will be found pure gold. That it will work is shown by the foregoing; that it will pay—Well, ask the twenty thousand anglers who visit Maine each year to enjoy their fishing. Ask the camp and hotel proprietors, who profit by their coming. Ask the Maine citizens, whose properties have advanced a thousand per cent in price. I'll agree to be bound by their evidence.

NOTE—For assistance in collecting the material for this paper I am deeply indebted to Edward A. Strout, Myrtle H. Hodgdon, Clarence M. Smith, Arthur W. Beckford and many others. Without their invaluable co-operation its preparation would have been impossible.

MRS. G. W. HALL SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lima, Ohio.—"Indeed, your medicine is all you say it is! I had very severe troubles such as women often have, and could do no heavy work. I was sick for several years, and from reading your ads, I finally decided to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now doing my own washing, which I haven't done for several years, and can walk long distances without those dragging pains and weak feelings. The Vegetable Compound is fine, and never forget to say a good word for it to other women when they say they need something."—Mrs. G. W. HALL, 539 Hazel Avenue, Lima, Ohio.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Hall's experience is but one of many.

John S. Brown passed away sometime Thursday night, Dec. 28th, being found dead in his bed, Friday morning. He had a slight cold a few days previous but this caused the family no alarm as he enjoyed good health and was well preserved considering his advanced years. His age was 79.

The deceased was the son of John and Lovina (Foster) Brown, and born in Hanover, Nov. 12, 1843, where he passed his early years. He married Faustina Stowe of Newry in 1879 and settled in that town. For a number of years up to his death he was one of the assessors of South Paris Village Corporation and in charge of the books. Accuracy and painstaking, his work was appreciated and his judgment in all matters found wise and equitable. Always an agreeable companion because his knowledge of human nature was broad and founded on the faith he applied in his daily intercourse with men.
